WINTER SALE - WHEELS, SNOW AND MORE! DISCOUNT UP TO 80%! The F&F franchise has evolved into The Expendables with cars and, like the previous film, happily combines absurd storytelling with top-notch action games. It begins with Dom's honeymoon in Cuba, where it is interrupted by a mysterious woman named Slate, played by Charlize Theron. She gets him to recruit his team to do a bunch of work for her, getting him from New York to Russia. Theron is perfect for the role, she's formidable, seductive and manipulative and would make the perfect Bond villain. As the sinister threatens, we must laugh. Dwayne Johnson and Scott Eastwood have a good running joke where they yell at each other from their prison cells. But Tyrese Gibson once again gives us his best improvisations, constantly taunting everyone, including newcomer Scott Eastwood. Director F. Gray (new to the series) has a lot of characters here. But he still manages to give them some kind of story arc and does a good job of keeping them interesting. Hobbs coaches his daughter's football team in his spare time, and there is a love triangle between Thea, Roman, and Ramsey. Letty then tries to figure out why the House betrayed them, and Jason Statham from the last movie is on the road to redemption. Another thing the franchise does so well is amazing stunts with minimal CGI (only when needed). The movie doesn't disappoint, some standout moments include a vehicle turning left and center, cars exiting buildings, the opening race scene, and a crash ball scene. While it's not perfect, there is a lot of nonsensical dialogue to let us know what's going on. The Gods Eye plot from Furious 7 used against the team is back. The scene where Dom hides from the eyes of the gods to enjoy a cup of tea with Helen Mirren is just hilarious. The laws of physics certainly don't exist (but it's not a documentary) and it's the most incredible entry in the series to date. Conversely, don't go to F8 expecting realism or logic because there aren't any. Just turn off your brain because it is stronger than your brain. Like its predecessors, it is full of exciting, unusual and adrenaline-filled action; and there are enough harpoon guns to rival Batman. Go with an open mind and you'll love it! Winter sales - bikes, snow and more! Even 80% discount! The F&A franchise has turned into merchandise released with cars and, like the latest film, happily embraces its absurd plot and the extraordinary action scenes. He starts with the Moon of Miele di Dom in Cuba, where he is interrupted by a mysterious woman called "Slate", played by Charlize Theron. This makes him rethink the fact that his team worked a lot to bring him from New York to Russia. Theron is perfect for this role, threatening, seductive and manipulator and could play the perceived villain. As if it were in danger, you can laugh. Dwayne Johnson and Scott Eastwood have a beautiful scene of jokes in which they scream on each of their prison cells. But once again, Tyrese Gibson offers us the best improvisation while constantly making fun of everyone, including the newcomer Scott Eastwood. The director F. Gray (a newcomer in the series) has many characters to confront here. However, he still manages to give them a defined historical arch and does a good job in making them fun. Hobbs trains the football team of his daughters in his spare time and between Tej, Roman and Ramsay a love triangle is born. Letty then tries to find out why Dom betrayed them and the bad Jason Statham embarks on the redemption path of the latest film. Another thing that the franchise does so well is to give us stunning acrobatics with minimum CGI (only when necessary). The film does not disappoint, some exclusive moments include vehicles on the left and in the center, driven cars outside a building, the beginning of a racing sequence and a crash ball scene. It is not perfect, however, there is a lot of use useless to find out what's going on. The narration Eye of the Gods of Furious 7 returns, which is used against order. The scene in which Dom hides from the "eye of God" to take tea with Helen Mirren, laughs. Of course, the laws of physics does not exist (but it is not a documentary), and it is the most incredible voice of the series. Just exclude the brain because it is more muscular than the brain. Like its predecessors, it is full of excitement, chills, adrenaline and adrenaline action; And there are quite harpoons to give Batman's twisted thread. Enter us with an open mind and you will love it! Plus, a great time at the movies. Translation and Sweating is the Best Movie Watching Site.
